UPSCALE AMERICAN GRILLE

I think I have the best job in the world. I must locate (and taste!) the finest wines from the greatest regions and winemakers around the world and introduce these wines to our guests at Cullen's Upscale American Grille. And while this quest has taken me on some amazing adventures and introduced me to some fascinating people, the most satisfying aspect of my profession is knowing that I have helped our restaurant patrons experience the unparalleled joy of pairing the perfect wine with a beautifully-executed dining experience.

With your permission, I can take you on a tour of the globe, glass by glass, bottle by bottle while helping you feel as welcome and comfortable as if you were in my own home. During my travels and dealings with vintners, I have selected some of the most intriguing wines in the world along with those from some of the masters of the game to stock our cellars with the best. On the pages that follow, I have organized wines by the classical regions but have also added my personal interpretation of what I feel these wines represent. So whether you're looking for a great Cabernet Sauvignon or are willing to sample a Syrah from France, you can make your decision with the confidence that you have picked a winner every time. In the same fashion that we enjoy sharing the tales of the farmers and ranchers that provide the food for our kitchen, we take equal pleasure in talking about our wine resources, so feel free to ask. Adventurous amateurs on a discovery mission or collectors with a taste for Grand Cru burgundy will be met with equal enthusiasm and interest by our staff. Because I remain eternally vigilant for new and exciting tastes from the greatest regions and winemakers in the world, I hope that you will check back with us often to see which wines have been added to our list. One of my mentors suggested that "Wine is for the masses, but it's the lack of knowledge that keeps it out of their grasp." At Cullen's Upscale American Grille, we say "Grasp away, wine lover!" and we pledge our assistance to this task. After dining with us, we hope you'll agree that a fine meal, good company, and a great bottle of wine are the best way to end a day.

"Wine makes daily living easier, less hurried, with fewer tensions and more tolerance."

GO Texan!

At Cullen's, we take great pride in supporting our local farmers and ranchers through the Go Texan! program. We also wanted to support our local wineries and winemakers, so we have added this page to spotlight some of the best growers from Texas. Here for your review is a selection of some excellent wines from the Lone Star State. Many are wines made in small production, so if you find one you like, enjoy it often while supplies last!

Bubblies, Tiny Tiny Bubblies

Presenting for your enjoyment, some of the greatest “celebration” wines of all time. These producers represent everything from the most classic and traditional styles of champagne to the best “up and comers” from places like New Mexico and Tasmania. Growing up, I didn’t listen to my mom a lot, but I do remember her saying “No one ever had a bad day drinking a sparkling wine.” Perhaps Mother does know best.

These wines are meant to be enjoyed cold and young. If you like light wines with crisp acidity or perhaps simply the al fresco way of life, these are the wines that will make you say “AHHHHHHH”.

Chardonnay

Without question, Chardonnay is the king of white wines. It can be treated to oak casks or left virgin in stainless steel tanks and both methods offer the opportunity for excellent tastes. The wines presented here are the products of some of the old masters of the game in combination with some smaller but not-to-be-overlooked producers. We'll be happy to tell you which is which.

American Syrah

Dear Syrah, Sirah, Shiraz or whatever you go by:

I love that you can change no matter where you grow. Your small berries teach us about the soil and winery from which you originate. Your dark, robust fruit that can be tamed by the slightest influence of oak drives us nuts. The fact that you pair so well with lamb or duck makes me wonder “What else?” We’re still having fun wrestling with your name but when you grow best in places like Walla Walla, Cote Rotie and Barossa, it is hard to take you seriously.

Sincerely,

Confused Wine Lover

Overlooked American Reds

If you had to do the same job day in and day out, you'd look for a break in routine, too. Take the winemaker, growing, producing and selling his cabernet all over the world, year after year. Sure he's drinking great wine on a daily basis while practicing his centuries-old craft, but everyone needs a change once in a while. These wines are those "break away from the ordinary" ventures: good winemakers, producing small lots of wine, that we usually don't understand, but still fall in love with. Experiment—and enjoy!

Argentina

Some call this South American wine-producing country the “final frontier” while others label it a “rediscovery.” We simply call it “Malbec” and these are wines that are taking the world by storm. Everyone wants to drink one and every winemaker is updating his passport to make some. With the color of a schoolhouse inkwell and a touch of the character of merlot and syrah, these are fantastic wines that deserve your full attention. When you have a group and no one knows what to drink, just say “Argentine MALBEC.”

Spanish Gems

Spain was once a place that time had forgotten. But now, those with the time and have money and they are remembering the past. Spanish wines are complex, rich and robust examples of grapes we can't spell and can barely pronounce. For powerful wines go to Toro, Monstant or Priorat. If finesse is more your style, check on the Riojas.

Italian Classics

For fashion, food, and wine, you've got to hand it to the Italians for style. These wines are classic varietals from classic regions and while some are timeless, others are nuvo. If you're a Pinot head looking to take it to the next level then look no further. You may miss some of the fruit but the structure and dryness will send you shooting over the moon.

Italian Blends

This is what happens when a bunch of really, really good winemakers stage a revolt against the government in their own way. They have started to grow—are you ready for this?—“forbidden grape varieties”. Scary grapes like merlot, cabernet sauvignon and syrah. Outrageous? Perhaps. But what these winemakers are really trying to do is identify the best possible grape to grow on a certain piece of soil on a certain piece of land. Sounds fair to us. And allow us to predict that this trend will soon become S.O.P. for all great wineries hoping to express the tastes of the New Italy.

Fancy Cabernets & Blends from France

Whether you are looking for a silky merlot from the Right Bank or a powerful Pauillac from the Left Bank or don't have a clue where you stand on the "bank question", these wines are the forerunners of the great cabernet and merlot selections. Some of these families represent ten generations of winemakers and are still at the forefront of their industry. Watch as centuries of knowledge translate into a beautiful glass of Claret.
